INTRODUCTION

Electronic Payslip is a computer system which allows the Human Resources Department to publish the payslip or other documents for Gestamp employees. After several years of usage of this tool, we have added new options on demand of the users and we also have improved technical aspects.

The private area of the system is published on the corporate intranet server and is accessible from any place under the corporate network or under the use of corporate tools that allow external access. In addition, for its operation, it is required:

- Internet Explorer 9 or above.
- Adobe Acrobat 9 or above, to be able to visualize the documents in PDF format.

This guide explains in detail the operation of the Electronic Payslip application.

INITIAL STEPS

Once you access the system by navigating to <https://pe.gestamp.com> you must validate with your email, which you have previously provided by the Human Resources Department, your password and additionally you must answer the security question by entering the result of the sum of the numbers shown on the screen:

After setting an email address and answering the security question, the application will send us a mail to the indicated address with the new temporal password to access the system.

Once we have logged on with the new credentials, the system will ask us again to change the password. You can do it like we did before. The first time we access the application, the following screen will appear, where you can modify your user's settings, such as the language, and you can also indicate if you want to receive notifications when a new document is published:

To access this screen in another moment, you have to navigate to the My Settings menu:

In the same drop-down you will also see shortcuts to other options such as: change the password or Log off from the system.

DOCUMENTS

Once entered in the system you will see the main screen with the published documents:

My Documents

Division:

Title

Total items: 1   Page 1 of 1

All the screens of the system are similar to this one and they have the same sections:

1. Main area where the information appears according to the current context.
2. Navigation area to access the main sections of the system.
3. Menus to access the secondary sections of the system.

The information displayed in the main area depends on the current context, but normally the first thing we see is a list of documents. Elements we may find:

1. Listing of paged records of 10 on each page.
2. Filters to select specific information based on several fields. There is a free search and several specific filters.

In the free search field we can write the searched text:

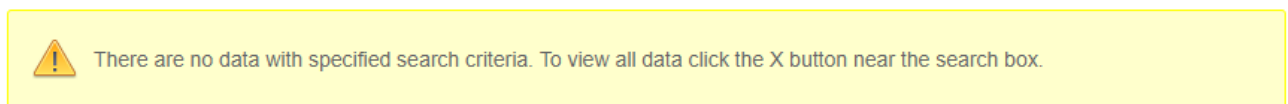

We can also perform a search more precisely by a specific field, for example:

Division

Multiple search options can be applied simultaneously. After performing the search, the information shown in the list of records corresponds to the search criteria and a label appears on the title of the screen indicating that there is a filter applied:

In the case that there is no record that corresponds to the criteria, an error message is displayed:

Once a search criteria has been applied, it can be saved as a default filter for later use, using the "Save" button in the filters toolbar:

Subsequently, the default filter would be applied every time we visit this system screen. The "Restore" button allows you to reapply the default filter and the "Delete" button removes all filters.

Once you have selected any document in the list, by clicking on it, the screen with the details of the selected document will appear, for example:

Some documents require that, after being downloaded and read, the employee must give agreement of the document. In this case an accept / reject agreement button appears and let the employee open a form with a legal text and the possibility to accept it or not. After download the document and, while the agreement is not answered, the same day and each 7 days the application will send a reminder to the email.
